- Objectives of the Practice

Sir Vithaldas Thackersey College of Home Science trains students to work with individuals of different ages as a part of community outreach program. This practice basically helps the students in skill building by translating the theoretical concepts of a course into field-based activities. These planned programs help to enhance the skills of working with individuals of different ages (children/ adolescents/ elderly) in the community. The nature of the outreach programs are as follows:

- The Context

The Community outreach is an integral part of the course work which necessitates working with children, adolescents and adults in different schools and NGOs. MENTORING OF STUDENTS FOR PERSONAL AND ACADEMIC CONCERNS

- Objectives of the Practice

The primary aim of this practice is to help each student to recognize their abilities and achieve according to their potential. Issues related to poor self-concept and self-esteem often hinders the participation and performance of students. Disturbed family life and inability to cope with discord in personal relationship leads to inattention, lack of concentration and depression.

The college with the help of staff from the Department of Human Development and College counsellor works towards rapport building and identifying students needing support. The rapport and trust of the student makes them comfortable to share their problems which leads to effective intervention.

- The Context

The issues for which mentoring is provided range from helping students overcome their misgivings, identifying learning strategies and manage their assignments. For some cases mentoring is provided in managing household responsibilities and college work.

The students having financial problems are encouraged to apply for scholarships, avail of institutional schemes such as “earn while you learn”.

In case of poor family cohesion, mentoring is provided to help students identify their role in addressing the family issues. If possible parents are also involved in helping the students.

Over the years mentoring has been provided for concerns such as

- Poor self-concept
- Sibling rivalry
- Poor social skills of students
- Academic stress
- Examination fear
- Poor family cohesion
- Financial problems at home
- Anxiety
- Premarital affairs of students
- Broken relationship
- Death of parents
- Extramarital affairs of parents
- Depression
- Drug addiction
- Sexual abuse

- The Practice

The institution is very supportive towards vulnerable students and encourages them to come and share their problems with the mentor or any teacher from the department. Their self-concept is boosted by providing them reinforcement on even the smallest success. Students who are first generation learners are assigned tasks which are close to their ability or they are paired with students who are capable and willing to provide them peer tutoring.

Students having family or relationship problems are encouraged to go for counseling. If there is a need and the parents are willing, the college also provides guidance to the parents.

If the need arises the institution collaborates with the parents in helping the student cope with the problems. In severe cases, the institution also helps the parents to liaison with a psychiatrist to provide the necessary intervention.

The other classmates are also sensitized so that they are supportive toward the student.

- Evidence of Success

- Most of our students start sharing their concerns freely not only as students but also as alumni.
- The student's participation and overall attendance and regularity shows remarkable improvement after the mentoring is initiated.
- Many of the students who showed below average performance improve in their academic performance. Students generally become more confident and goal directed. Plan and undertake post-graduation studies.
- The relationship of students with parents and peers also showed remarkable improvement.
- Many of the alumni have provided feedback that the mentoring provided by the institution has had an immense impact on their lives.

- Problems Encountered and Resources Required

Mentoring can be very time consuming and managing time between college hours can be difficult. Often the mentoring is provided in the later part of college as privacy can be ensured at that time.

When parental or professional interventions are required there is resistance from students and convincing them to take help is challenging. However the mentoring at institutional level is continued to provide the necessary support and the overall experience of student mentoring has been very encouraging.
